How can we ensure no learners are dealt out of our schools?

How can we promote high expectations for all students?

How can we enhance our observation and supervision skills to promote equity in the classroom?

You will find suggestions for answering these questions and many more during this presentation. GESA encourages educators to utilize research-based instructional strategies and resources that support high expectations. The necessity of high expectations for all students has been repeatedly identified as an essential factor for educational success at all levels. How can we reduce areas of disparity related to gender, race, national origin, sexuality, developmental or physical disability, socio-economic class, perceived ability, or any of the labels that tend to deal people out or permit them to deal themselves in or out of the educational system? The GESA goals and materials are aligned with national and state priorities of effective learning techniques and teaching strategies geared toward improvement in student achievement.

Carol Blunt-White is the President and CEO of CBW Associates, a professional development, coaching, and facilitation consulting firm, and the Director of NYS K-16 Alliance. Prior to the launching of CBW Associates, Carol was the Acting Executive Coordinator for the Office of Equity and Access, and Chief of the Bureau of Professional Career Opportunity Programs for the New State Education Department.
